

Building log homes for the past 20 years has taught us a thing or three about log home construction. We've built everything from small tool sheds to 7000 square foot 'logmansions'. Building a log home is quite a bit different from a traditional home and we love the challenge. We've run into and solved pretty much every problem you can think of in building a log home--everything from rocky mountainous virtually nonaccessible lots to how to conceal electrical wiring in a solid log wall.

We love log homes and love to build them. In fact our owner Dan Heinrich lives in a log home he built himself. If you're looking for a company with alot of experience in log home building you've come to the right place. Be sure to check out our gallery tab for examples of our work.